

READING GROUP GUIDE

Three Tearless Histories
By Erich Hackl
Translated by Mike Mitchell

Introduction

A master of German non-fiction and literature, Erich Hackl humanizes tragedies of epic proportions in three stirring and poignant stories of individuals affected by mid-century fascism. Inspired by photographs, and with the aid of descendants and witnesses, Hackl brings to light three evocative personal histories, widening the frame and setting the stillness of history back in motion.

“The Klagsbrunn Family: A Story Coming to Light” traces the multi-generational story of emigrants from Vienna to Brazil, where their grandson and his wife were tortured during the dictatorship for communist activities and fled to Chile, Argentina, Italy – and then, ironically, a now-welcoming Berlin.

“The Photographer of Auschwitz” is a biographical sketch of Wilhelm Brasse (1917–2012), a Polish political prisoner who photographed Auschwitz prisoners and saved evidence of Mengele’s crimes.

“Tschofenig: The Name Behind the Street” recounts an improbable wedding at Dachau and attempts to resurrect a resistance fighter’s accomplishments amidst a family squabble that threatens to bury her forever.

"Highly recommended ... a haunting book."

– Samuel Moser
Neue Zürcher Zeitung

"Hackl’s narrative is masterful and compelling."

– Der Tagesspiegel, Berlin

REVIEWS

"Hackl's use of emotional triggers related to injustice and redemption are both subtle and commanding. In the same way that we relate to injustice of the oppressed, this author delivers stunning situations in which innocent families and characters are destroyed by an unjust rule of law. Yet the ultimate value of a book like this lies in the author's delivery of life between the lines, beyond the vagaries of a reader's sentient ability to comprehend. Here, Hackl elicits his best and most enduring success."

– Charles S. Weinblatt, New York Journal of Books

"The clash of fascism and communism on two continents over half a century, as traced through a few family photographs. ... Hackl is like an investigating detective pursuing a case where all the principals are long dead and the few who remain may be reluctant to talk...These powerful inquiries spurred by photos are history made flesh, the untold lives of the mostly forgotten."

– Kirkus Reviews

"Erich Hackl's concise and hauntingly dense works of prose have gained him a huge audience and great success. At the bottom of his efforts are usually some forgotten beings, victims of our century's cruel history, with their authentic albeit not exactly remembered biographies. Here Hackl, the Austrian author, overly sensitized perhaps because of his own country's extreme insensitivities, steps in and tries to bring about an act of belated justice and redemption. This obviates the question whether Hackl is a fiction writer or a historian, a lawyer of the 'small people' or a missionary voice of human dignity: he is all of these."

– Erich Wolfgang Skwara, World Literature Today

READING GROUP QUESTIONS

1. The author uses language to portray photographs in detail for readers without providing corresponding visuals. How does this omission strengthen the way he presents photographs as living history rather than as a static image? How does this affect any expectations you have of the book as biographical?
2. In "The Klagsbrunn Family," what are Victor and Marta's motivations for seeking asylum in Germany? Marta remarks that they had "lost everything." In your opinion, is their move an ending or beginning?
3. In what ways does responsibility to family manifest itself in the lives of the characters in any of the three stories? In what ways does it hinder or motivate them? How does this sense of responsibility relate to Hackl's overall investigations into the personal histories of these characters?
4. What were some instances in which stories or memories passed down to the next generation provided strong leads in piecing together a larger story?
5. All three stories illustrate how imprisonment—and in some cases, torture—are powerful tools used by fascist regimes to silence dissent. Can you draw any parallels to current events?
6. In "The Photographer of Auschwitz," Wilhelm Brasse relies on small gestures, such as giving starving prisoners bread, in order to cope with his situation. In what other ways, mentally and physically, does Brasse help prisoners? What were his personal motivations for assisting the resistance network?
7. The photographer Brasse's photograph of the civil wedding of his friend Rudi Friemel to Margarita Ferrer reveals Hackl's mastery in his investigative methods. How do the extensive threads that helped Hackl uncover the name of the photographer make both the photographer and his friend Rudi seem more real, rather than just historical figures?

8. In "Tschofenig: The Name Behind the Street," Hackl presents various letters written by Gisela from the concentration camp to her family that do not mention the hardships she endured under the Nazis. How do Hackl's writings and research go beyond these letters and highlight her role in the resistance while delineating her personal story?

9. Hackl describes two photographs with Gisela and Pepe Tschofenig: the photo of them in the Carnic Alps in 1933, and their wedding photo in 1944 from Dachau. How do his descriptions of these photographs serve as a literary device that allows him to discuss their histories? Does understanding the history behind these photographs transcend the still moment captured in the photograph and enrich your understanding of the Tschofenigs?

10. Considering their histories under oppressive regimes, discuss the social responsibilities, if any, of the many photographers throughout these stories (Wilhelm Brasse, Marta Saavedra dos Anjos, Kurt Klagsbrunn...) in capturing and revealing injustice. What was the motivation for each of them in choosing photography as a practice?

11. Are there moments in the book that connect to the perception of news media today? Does the current attack on the legitimacy of investigative journalism evoke elements of fascism?

12. In German, the word "Geschichte" encompasses both the past and the fictional. In reflecting on the three stories, why do you think translator Mike Mitchell decided to translate this word to "histories"? Discuss the differences across generation, location, and circumstances of the central characters that may have influenced this decision.

Erich Hackl (b. 1954) is an award-winning Austrian author and translator. He has been a regular contributor to the Wiener Tagebuch, editor of the Aurora-Library, a book series of international poetry, and he is a regular contributor to the Wochen Zeitung in Zürich. He has published numerous Hispanic literature anthologies, and is recipient of over a dozen literature and translation prizes, including the Premio Hidalgo, the Solothurner Literaturpreis, the Literature Prize of the City of Vienna, and the Austrian Prize for Literary Translation. Two of his books have been adapted to film and his work has been published in 26 languages.

Photo: Pedro Timón Solinís

A masterful and authoritative chronicler.
– Michael Opitz, Deutschlandradio Kultur

The name Erich Hackl has become a trademark for wonderfully sensitive real-life stories, unique in contemporary German literature.
– Tobias Becker, Kulturspiegel, Hamburg

A compulsive researcher on the border between literature and literary-historical reportage.
– Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung

Mike Mitchell is an award-winning translator of French and German. He is the recipient of the Schlegel-Tieck Prize for translations of German works published in Britain and has won the British Comparative Literature Association translation competition twice for translations from German. He has been shortlisted for many awards including the Weidenfeld prize, the Aristeion prize, and the Kurt Wolff prize. In 2012 the Austrian Ministry of Education, Art and Culture awarded him a lifetime achievement award as a translator of literary works.

DOPPELHOUSE PRESS is an independent publishing company with a focus on architecture, design, and art, as well as histories of immigration and exile. Our mission is to bring together a plurality of voices relating to architecture and the arts, as well as stories of exile and displacement of creative peoples, giving shape to little-known histories through personal testimony and critical reflection in the form of memoirs and biographies, monographs, critical texts, and select fiction.

DoppelHouse Press is based in Los Angeles, a home to many exiles and immigrants from all over the world, which makes us further able to reflect on global conditions, cultures, politics, and crises that disperse creative people to new homelands, where they often flourish, transform local vernaculars, and influence future generations. in the form of memoirs and biographies, monographs, critical texts, and select fiction.

<http://www.DoppelHousePress.com>

Contact:

Publisher@DoppelHousePress.com

T: (424) 258-4423 | F: (323) 349-0985

Three Tearless Histories

By Erich Hackl

Translated by Mike Mitchell

January 2017

Hardcover

216 pp.; trim size 5" x 7.5"

9780997003437

US $24.95

Electronic galley available through Edelweiss